Fulton Proves With Deliberation That He Can "Take It" "Kayo."

"HE Evening World wired Fred Fulton for a few lines about his victory over Frank Moran. For a year we have known that the big planterer bad every physical advantage. combined with a hard punch and remarkable skill. He has won many fights in sensational style, appearing like a giant Fitzsimmons. Yet there has been some criticism of his ability to take punishment and his willingness to stand up under it. Personally, I have always believed that what some called a "yellow streak" in Fulton was merely his intelligent application of boxing skill—the skill that doesn't favor a headlong, slambang, reckless method of fighting when in temporary danger. In old days Fulton's method would have been spoken of as "good generalship." Short, no-decision bouts are killing

Well, I showed them the stuff I was made of. I stood up, exposed my jaw and let Moran hit me twenty-six times. I counted the blows. Two or three of them shook me a little, but I was no more scared than if I were sitting in a barber shop reading The Evening World sport page. I wish I could describe my state of mind. I took a big chance in letting a husky fellow pound on me at will for a minute, but it is worth it. I just had to show them, and I did.

Fulton has explained. He was merely doing the thing that Whilard in the seventh and eighth rounds of his bout with Moran. Only Willard let Moran land and turned his head with the blows to break their force. And Willard didn't renew his own attack afterward and knock Moran out.

(Statement made especially for The Evening World by victim of Fulton's knockout punch).

Fred Fulton is a better man than Jess Willard. I was whipped Monday night by one of the best fighters that ever stepped into a ring. While I will say that Fulton is better than Willard, I am not prepared to say that the big Minnesotan is the equal of Jack Johnson. I was in good shape and have no excuses to offer. I was beaten by a better man. I suppose I am growing a little old. I felt my age a bit last night when I tried to set a hot pace and was met with an equally hot pace, but I shall not retire. I have my health and the boys at the camp will stand by me. I am going back to Spartanburg and give the fellows the best that's in me in the way of teaching them the manly art. I hope Willard will give Fred a chance, IF HE DOES THERE'LL

Boxing at Soldier Camps

This is the fourth of a series of articles on boxing in the army especially prepared for The Evening World and written by the civilian instructors, who are for the most part well known pugiliste stars of the country. They will show the benefits derived by our soldiers from the systematized study of the manty art, its relation to the all important bayonet fighting and its value as a conditioner of men for serious business "over there." It is a big work, as will be seen from the articles as they appear in these columns from time to time.

New Orleans Promoter Says Bout Must Be to a Decision.

Jess Willard must show his hand now or forever hold his peace. Dominick Tortorich, manager of the Loaisiana Auditorium Athletic Club, before which Fred Fulton stopped Frank Moran in three rounds, last night telegraphed the heavyweight champion of the world an offer of a purse of $100,000 for a twenty-round bout between himself and Fulton. Tortorich stipulated that the bout must be of that duration to a retcree's decision. Tortorich further advised Willard, who is in Jacksonville, Fla., at present, that the purse could be divided to suit the principals.
